Annual SWPONL Conference | August 27 - 28, 2020

SWPONL

Welcome to the 41st Annual Southwestern Pennsylvania Organization of Nurse Leaders (SWPONL) Education Conference! We celebrate the year of the nurse while we learn at this conference: “2020 Year of the Nurse Leader: Past, Present, and Future.”

Cutting-edge educational programming continues to be an important benefit of participating in the SWPONL Annual Conference. The program delivery will be a change for us as we move to a virtual platform due to the public health crisis and we have identified unique alternative opportunities for you to connect online with other nurse leaders and colleagues. These opportunities include bringing you inspiring keynote speakers, providing in-depth panel content, online chat, real-time polling, live Q+A, and an interactive forum discussion

Your SWPONL’s Education and Membership Committees have planned a conference that will exceed your expectations. National and local experts will challenge us to think differently. The conference will start with our keynote speaker, Dr. Dan Weberg, Senior Director for Innovation and Leadership at Kaiser Permanente who will help us build cultures of innovation and we will end the conference with a motivational session on leading with care, courage, and collaboration from Dr. Kimberly Delbo. Additionally, we are excited to feature Pat Polansky, who will inspire us to build healthier communities with a focus on leadership, nursing education, and interprofessional collaboration, and Dr. Adele Webb, who will identify opportunities for nurse leaders and how we can help with the nurses role in shaping healthcare.

Additionally, there are some exciting updates to the Conference including a follow up session based on attendee feedback, and the ability to view the educational sessions in the future. Of course, there will be opportunities for attendees to win prizes in some fun formats leading up to, and during the conference on behalf of the sponsors.

The entire program includes conference speakers to provide the most up to date information based on your feedback and requested topics. In-between you will continue to learn and connect with old, and new friends. Improving the conference experience, a unique opportunity has been scheduled for the top three posters in each category to deliver an oral presentation and a link to all of the inspiring accepted posters will be available for review.

Please take time throughout the conference to engage and talk with sponsors who have generously supported our conference. This is an ideal opportunity to learn from each other on cutting edge programs and technologies for better patient outcomes.

According to Facebook’s, Sheryl Sandberg, “the ability to learn is the most important quality a leader can have.”

Please know that the board is here for you if you need anything. We are committed to serving our members and encourage you to reach out to us if you need anything from SWPONL.

Again, thank you for your participation in SWPONL.

Sincerely,

Jill Marie Larkin

Conference Details

We are excited to offer the program in a virtual platform with unique alternative opportunities for you to connect online with other nurse leaders and colleagues. The conference will include bringing you inspiring keynote speakers, providing in-depth content with the interactive expert panel talk, an online chat, real-time polling, live Q+A, and an interactive forum.

The virtual platform for the Conference will be through Matchbox Productions. Matchbox Productions will be providing assistance to attendees in advance and during the Conference. The session link and more information will be sent to all attendees one week in advance of the Conference.

Exclusive Benefits this year:

- An exclusive feature to the conference program is the offering for an additional session based on the evaluations from Conference attendees. Dr. Dan Weburg will present again in the fall based on the needs/recommendations of the audience. This session is included in the cost of the conference.
- At your convenience, following the conference, attendees can view sessions at any time.

Posters will represent new ideas and programs to improve patient care and patient care delivery, developed by individuals and organizations within the Southwestern Pennsylvania healthcare region. A dedicated session will feature the top three posters in each category in an oral presentation. Additionally, posters can be accessed to view individually, through a link.

The Expert Panel session will be an exciting interactive panel talk with nursing leaders in various positions from four major institutions. This session will start with their personal reflections on what the “Year of the Nurse” means to them. The discussion will then focus on how leadership development has changed over the years, lessons learned from nursing leadership mentors, and what qualities are essential for future nurse leaders.

Please connect with our sponsors during the noted times in the program. They help to support this important educational activity for SWPONL and this partnership helps to provide better patient outcomes. There will be an opportunity to interact personally during the conference in addition to the sponsor information that will be available to attendees in the conference platform.
